G-MEN RANSOM KIDNAP TRAP WITH RANSOM CASH MARKS

G-BETWEEN'S RANSOM SEIZED BY GANG AFTER CASH PAID

belonged to George's uncle, F. Rodman Tilcomb.

They also denied knowledge of the newspaper report that Tilcomb was the intermediary who delivered the ransom to the kidnapers; that the transaction was in the woods near Elms, about sixty miles west of here, and that the kidnapers set Tilcomb's foot by stealing his car.

The newspaper said Tilcomb was found by Charles Ingram, assistant general manager of the timber company, who followed him in another car.

INGRAM PAID, SAID GEORGE

Ingram and Tilcomb, who all others close to the case, have refused to comment.

They declare they have decided to make no statement other than the formal one issued by George's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., shortly after their son was restored Saturday.

Investigators refused to reveal who paid the Weyerhaeuser ransom and when or where it was paid.

George was quoted Saturday as saying Tilcomb paid it. It was not revealed how he knew.

As soon as George was safe at home the federal agents went into action. The kidnapers, meanwhile, had vanished.

Highway traps were set.

One, in northeastern Oregon, promised results, but came to nothing.

A suspected automobile sped through Great Bend last night and was immediately pursued.

Wires hummed with descriptions given by the nine-year-old victim of the three masked men who held him prisoner for eight days. He had said they called each other

Allen, Harry and Bill. Authorities immediately associated these names with Alvin Karpis—Allen and Alvin having a similar sound.

The $200,000 prize the Weyerhaeuser gangsters sought became for the moment their greatest peril. The numbers of the thousands of bills in the $200,000 bundle of currency were being distributed by the government to all banks, transportation terminals and other crossroads of circulating money.

The arrest of Davis was hailed here at once as indication that the G-men would not rest upon the traps they have set, but would seek out all suspects.

SEALS FARMER'S LIPS

The official silence which has covered activities of Department of Justice agents since they came here 10 days ago continued today. There was no official announcement on who paid the ransom money, or to whom, or where.

The G-men also persuaded Louisa, Leona, woodcutting, in whose house George sought shelter early Saturday, to keep secret anything the boy may have told him.

George made a semi-public appearance in the afternoon for the news.

A special automobile was spotted on the Pendleton-Cold Springs road Sunday followed by police cars. It was for a time believed to contain the kidnapers.

But the automobile in the lead also turned out to be an official car seeking the kidnapers.

If nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, Tacoma, Wash., kidnap victim is just a typical American boy, then America can be proud of her sons. Here he is in four characteristic poses, as he smilingly tells newspapermen the story of his eight-day ordeal in the hands of his brutal captors. No complaints. No tears. No heroics. Not on George's part, anyhow. He was apparently unshaken by his harrowing experience in captivity and his narrow escape from a violent death.

Karpis Aid Admits Guilt In $200,000 Bremer Snatch

By Associated Press
St. Paul, June 3.—Volney Davis, 33, considered by police one of the most dangerous members of the Barker-Karpis gang, pleaded guilty here today to a part in the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker.

Davis formally admitted his guilt a few hours after he had been brought here by plane under a heavy guard of special agents of the United States Department of Justice.

His capture—by a man named Saturday in Chicago—had been announced only a few minutes before Davis went into court.

Davis was arraigned before Federal Judge M. K. Joyce, in the main Federal courtroom where one of Davis' chiefs, Arthur (Doc) Barker, was convicted a few weeks ago of engineering the Bremer kidnaping. Barker received a life sentence.

WROTE RANSOM NOTES
When the judge read the Bremer case indictment, which charged Davis with writing the ransom notes while the banker was a prisoner, Barker said quietly: "Guilty."

Davis' capture by federal agents in Chicago, where he walked into a carefully laid trap and found himself surrounded by seven special agents, leaves only one important member of the Barker-Karpis gang at large—Alvin (Doc) Karpis, co-conspirator of the band and unofficial "Public Enemy No. 1."

On motion of George F. Sullivan, United States district attorney, sentencing of Davis was deferred, without definite date for it being set.

Federal agents in Chicago had questioned Davis since Saturday, presumably hoping he would reveal the hiding places of Karpis.

His action in arraigning him on the Bremer charge was taken as indicating they did not believe he had any part in the kidnaping of Little George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma.

CHAINED IN FLARE
Federal agents in Chicago charged on airplane last night, abouted Davis to a seat, and set out for St. Paul. At Madison, Wis., they were locked down by weather but took off later.

Captured in Kansas city last February, Davis escaped when the federal agent plane was forced down at Orville, Ill., near Chicago.

Confirming reports that the arrest of Davis followed a shooting affray, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, said: "We had a slight unpleasantness while taking Volney into custody."

QUAKE-IT CITY ISOLATED

By International News Service
Quetta, India, June 3.—Quetta, city of the dead, where at least 20,000 corpses lie under the ruins, was officially wiped off the map today, sealed by thousands of troops to protect the living from plague and famine.

While the earth still rumbled with quakes and landslides, refugee trains from the plateau and lowlands of northern Baluchistan sped to Lahore and other centers, bearing the badly injured.

An Indian government statement said today, but omitted his whereabouts.

"There is no hope of rescuing any more living."

Twenty thousand British and Indian troops, with tanks and cavalry detachments, closed the city and plunged into the gigantic labor of extricating trapped survivors.

A score of airplanes brought food and medicine and served for protection against cholera and lockjaw. At the request of King George, a fund of $5,700,000 had been collected to celebrate his jubilee was devoted to the earthquake sufferers.

The continuing roar of explosions interfered with the gruesome task, for engineers decided to blow up large sections of ruins to prevent the spread of disease.

OUTWIT KIDNAPERS
By False Alarm

Valdosta, Ga., June 3 (AP)—Royal Daniel, editor and publisher of the Quittman (Ga.) Free Press, reported to police he was kidnaped last night, but outwitted his abductors by turning in a false fire alarm when they let him write and mail a ransom note.

He said he was held up by two men as he left his office and started up Edwin Stevens, 41, of Main street, who was also gagged by the bandits, attracted attention of neighbors by breaking a window and kicking out the glass.

He told police he was approached by one of the two men at Howard avenue and Wayland street.

HUGH JOHNSON
Speech Wednesday

General Hugh Johnson, in what is expected to be his first public address since the downfall of the NRA, will speak before the convention of the New England Bankers' Association at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, on Wednesday 12:30 p. m.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce and the New England Bankers' Association are co-operating in the meeting in the expectation that General Johnson will bring a message to business men from the administration.

An Astounding Statement

Los Angeles, Calif., May 31, 1935.

William Randolph Hearst, San Simon.

Dear Mr. Hearst:

THE Herald and Express this evening carries a statement by President Roosevelt to the effect that the NRA which is one of the most astounding of its kind ever issued by an American President.

Mr. Roosevelt naively propounds the question whether there should be forty-eight different states attempts to regulate the economic and social life of the nation or whether this shall be the function of the Federal Government.

Is it possible that Mr. Roosevelt does not know that it was never intended to be the function of our Federal Government to regulate the economic and social life of the nation?

DOES not Mr. Roosevelt know that these functions were specially and particularly reserved to the States?

Does not the President recognize that this is one of the great points of genius underlying the American system of government; a system of dual sovereignty allocating to the Federal Government powers of broad national concern and to the State the power of local government?

The President is also quoted as saying that the implication of the Supreme Court's decision if carried to a logical conclusion would strip the United States Government of many of its powers.

BUT how can the Government be stripped of powers it never possessed?

Every law student knew that the Federal Government never possessed the powers arrogated to itself when Congress passed the NRA.

What does the President mean when he accuses the Supreme Court of going back to the "horse and buggy" days of 1789?

Rather should he be thankful that this august body saved from complete destruction that Constitution of ours which Mr. Roosevelt solemnly swore to uphold and defend.

On March 4, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt took a solemn oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States.

Is it possible that he must now be reminded of that oath? Sincerely,

EUGENE H. MARCUS.

WALSH SAYING DETAILS KNOWN

Providence, June 3.—Mystery surrounding the kidnaping and murder of Daniel J. Walsh, Rhode Island rum king, has finally been pierced.

Before nightfall Providence police inspectors believe they will have in custody three men, actual slayers of Walsh.

The big break in the two-year-old mystery came early Saturday afternoon when a state police officer arrested a woman accompanied by a Bridgport, Ct., barge captain, on a tip that the captain could solve the Walsh case.

"That arrests had been made in connection with the case was not revealed until early today eight pages are as many as any Italian needs to read.

Much can be said in eight big pages. Genesis tells about the creation of the world, the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve, with the story of the snake, all complete, in less than one newspaper page. But what about the comic strips, the column editorials, "full of sound and fury," and the wonderful advertisements?

In 1934, China executed 263 for violation of laws against opium, and according to Mr. Hoover's report to the League of Nations actually executed six opium addicts that had been "cured" and had relapsed. Imagine our hanging or beheading a man for breaking a swear-word!

We are not even fall or fine "respectable" customers of the bootleggers, although that would have stopped 80 per cent of bootlegging.

Today, with 60 per cent of the liquor sold still bootleg liquor, nothing drastic is done by the government. Be careful in buying alcoholic spirits, if you buy any. Know the label and make sure that it is genuine, by buying from a reputable merchant. Bootleggers are actually counterfeiting the government's excise stamps to the tune of millions. And whiskey bottles of peculiar shape, indicating well known brands are bought for 25 cents each, and more when empty. Bootleggers refill them.

CLUES ON JOB

Gang Set Own Trap

(Editor's Note: One of the country's foremost writers who has worked with "G-men" on other kidnapping cases and is thoroughly conversant with the crime situation throughout the country, Courtney Ryley Cooper has written the following article on the marking of the $200,000 ransom bills in the Weyerhaeuser case.)

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Tacoma, Wash., June 3.—The $200,000 in ransom money the Weyerhaeusers paid is not worth ten cents on the dollar. It is the most expendable money that ever sought to make its way into the underworld.

The story of all this is told in some 35 mimeographed pages, which have been rushed to banks, newspapers and law enforcement agencies throughout the United States.

The bound "Book of Numbers" contained little phraseology. There is merely a statement on the first page, bearing the signature of John Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and active head of the pursuit of the kidnapers.

It announces that herewith is attached a list of the currency which constituted the ransom. The serial numbers of the bills are arranged in logical sequence.

20,000 Clues

It also asks that a sharp lookout be kept on all currency and in the event one of these bills comes into the possession of anyone with this list, a notification be made at once to the nearest office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

But it says nothing of the fact that John Edgar Hoover, in arranging the ransom payment, arranged also that be placed in the hands of the kidnapers exactly twenty thousand deadly clues, any one of which can lead to the capture of the guilty persons.

The kidnapers and their confederates have endangered their liberty and their lives in the stealing of George Weyerhaeuser, in for a mere fraction of what they thought they were getting.

There is not a "hot money" passer in America who will "wash" this currency, exchanging it for "cool" money, unless it is offered to him at such a tremendous discount he can afford to hold it for years, if necessary, before attempting to pass it.

The mere rub of a bank check against the serials of these ransom notes sufficiently to spot the "snatch currency" and any of its pass through his hands.

Not until the kidnapers read this story will they realize how badly Hoover outsmarted them. They received the ransom money and accepted it, but they had asked for $200,000 divided as follows: $50,000 in $5 bills, $50,000 in $10 bills and $100,000 in $20 bills.

Set Own Trap

True to their orders, all these bills except a negligible number, were in Federal reserve notes. They were used notes and not in a series. Thus the every demand of the kidnapers was kept.

Even then, John Edgar Hoover beat them at their own game. Every bill in that outfit is in the hands of the United States government, a volunteer special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, armed with the job of catching bad snatches—there is provided the money is traced.

If it is not spent, the snatches have their horrible life in the hands of the FBI.

The explanation is simple. When the kidnapers received the ransom money, it was apparently merely a mixture of Federal Reserve notes, exactly as they had asked. That is because they had been carefully misled to give that appearance.

But if they could have viewed them as the bills appear on the notification list, they would have found some surprising facts.

First of all, every bill, except nine, is upon the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco. This means they bear at the beginning of the serial number the initial "F." The 12th letter of the alphabet, San Francisco is the 12th Federal Reserve District.

With the exception of a very few notes, every serial number followed by the letter "A." Thus any person who handles money and who has this list may be suspicious of a bill beginning and ending with these initials. But only momentarily.

Of the $20 bills, there is only one in which the first two numbers are above 15. That is a single $20, No. L46014391A. Otherwise the first two numbers of the 19 bills are from 00 to 15. There are no serials which begin with 15.

Number Maze

In the $10 notes, the first two numbers run from 00 to 13, with the exception, that is, of the $10, No. L46014391A. In this list there are no serials beginning with 13 or 17.

In the $5 bills, the graduation runs from 00 to 13, with the exception of serials beginning with 07 and 08. There are not present.

Thus the beginning of the serial numbers are held within narrow confines, making it possible for persons acquainted with the list to instantly check the 12th district note which comes to him. There are no serials which begin with 15.

two or three notes beginning with certain double numbers. Five minutes of memorization will allow any teller in the country to know these notes at a glance without consulting any list.

In addition, there are a dozen combinations of numbers by which tellers can aid their memory—triple repetitions of the same numbers, for instance, and in one case, six zeros in a row.

To the average person who looks upon currency with curiosity regarding its meaning, these ransom bills may mean little. But to bank tellers and others accustomed to watching serials and other markings, the serial numbers of the Weyerhaeuser kidnap ransom are a "wanted" circular, each one demanding that its possessor be taken to the nearest office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for questioning.

Bankers of "hot money" do not like that. The underworld usually pays a dime down for such bills and doesn't want them even then.

But it says nothing of the fact that John Edgar Hoover, in arranging the ransom payment, arranged also that be placed in the hands of the kidnapers exactly twenty thousand deadly clues, any one of which can lead to the capture of the guilty persons.

The kidnapers and their confederates have endangered their liberty and their lives in the stealing of George Weyerhaeuser, in for a mere fraction of what they thought they were getting.

'Magic Eye' Camera Shows You Perfect Drive by 'Perfect Golfer'

Relaxation! No Tenseness Here!

Balance! Back-swing at Height!

Concentration! Head Still Down

Power! Right Arm Straight

Poise! No Loss of Balance!

Thanks to the "Magic-Eye" Camera, here you can see how Joyce Jones calls the "perfect golfer"—makes a principal part of her technique in getting distance, according to experts, is her knack of keeping her left side braced rigidly at the moment of impact. Successive photographs show the British woman star addressing the ball, reaching the height of her backswing, getting off the drive, and following through. See how perfectly her body is balanced from beginning to end of the swing. See the stone-wall rigidity of her whole left side, as club meets ball. Observe her head and eyes still down, long after the ball is speeding, bullet-like, on its way. Note that right arm, stiff as a poker. Now you know how it's done! All you need do is do it!

BOY WILL NEVER BE THE SAME'

He knows how it feels to be kidnapped! And he knows the anguish of a parent whose child is kidnapped. Twice the vicious "snatch racket" has struck at John Factor, rich Chicagoan. For 12 days he was held prisoner and tortured by the mobster and his son, Jerome, likewise was a kidnap victim.

Today John Factor, now in seclusion in Hollywood, tells in his own words the experiences of a victim and of the father of a victim. And, as one who speaks from searing, indelible knowledge, he analyzes the kidnapping of George Weyerhaeuser.

This is the first of a series of articles in which Factor's amazing story is told.

By JULIUS KLEIN

Hollywood, June 3.—"The kidnapping of George Weyerhaeuser was the job of a clever and vicious band of criminals," were the first words spoken by John Factor, who himself was kidnapped and held prisoner 12 days by the Touhy gang of Chicago. He continued:

"That poor boy will never be the same. The ordeal of being held prisoner, in the hands of desperate criminals, in constant fear of death, will leave its mark for life."

"How his parents have suffered. I know, for my own. Jerome was also the victim of kidnapers. I believe the anguish and pain he has suffered, while he was held for eight days, was worse for me than the horrible experience of being held captive."

GRIM FACTS WERE AN EXPERT OF FACTOR ON THE "SNATCH RACKET."

Well do I remember the features of Factor's face when he was and how he was being held down, with his eyes swollen from being blindfolded.

1500 TROUT
Landed at N. H. Pond

Derry, N. H., June 3 (AP)—Game wardens said today the largest catch of square-tailed trout at Noble's pond, Fisherman's paradise, was 1500.

Anglers lined the pond on opening day, Saturday, and carried away 1000 fish from seven to 13 pounds. The catch was half as large. The pond will be open Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

There will be at least five candidates for mayor of Everett at the forthcoming city election, it was revealed today. Mayor James A. Roche will seek re-election.

He told the G-men and they did the rest.

"When I was held prisoner one of the worst of my abductors was that some other gang would collect the ransom intended for them. I believe this letter was given out for the purpose of creating a similar impression with the abductors of little George."

"George Weyerhaeuser has been returned to his parents by his abductors for $200,000, but they have not returned the same boy. That boy may never be the same. His terrible experience and constant fear of death will leave its mark on him. It always does."

New York, June 3.—With the Atlantic blue ribbon prize on her maiden voyage, the giant new French liner Normandie steamed into the harbor today amid a wild acclaim by diving airplanes and the blasts of sirens on hundreds of welcoming craft.

Her voyage was the fastest ever made by a transatlantic liner.

Averaging, officially, 26.8 knots from Southampton to Ambrose light in the outer harbor at 12:00 a. m., the Normandie set a new record for the Italian liner Riza on a run from Gibraltar.

The liner reached Ambrose light in the outer harbor at 12:00 a. m., E. S. T., but had to remain several hours for a flood tide before she can sail past Godtha's skyscrapers to her new Hudson dock. Besides the mythical blue ribbon won for the fastest time across the ocean—the Normandie set this record.

Noisy Welcome

Flag-dotted ships, looking almost like toys from the towering height of the Normandie's upper decks, the crowded about the Whistlers, sirens, and deep-toned fog horns bared a cacophony of welcome.

Among the welcoming craft were the official city welcome boats and coast guard cutters crowded with dignitaries "down the bay" to meet the Normandie. Glimmering overhead, their motors adding to the noisy celebration, airplanes circled, dove and soared away, accompanying the ship from far out.

As the mammoth Normandie approached the Narrows her consort, with olden days before the mast was strikingly shown in the deck as a fully rigged four-masted, all sails set, passed close under her bows.

Mrs. Albert Lebrun, wife of the President of France, and the Normandie's bridge and stood with responsive to the salutes of harbor craft.

BULLET WOUNDS
Uruguay Chief

Montevideo, Uruguay, June 3 (AP)—Wounded slightly in the President Gabriel Terra was little the worse for his experience today, and his guest, President Getulio Vargas of Brazil, had the would-be assassin's bullet as a souvenir.

Bernardo Garcia, a former Nationalist deputy, fired upon the presidential party as it was entering the city yesterday at the Maroñas course.

Garcia, under arrest, was treated for wounds inflicted by the bullet. Police officer who seized him. He had attempted suicide after arrest.

1500 TROUT
Landed at N. H. Pond

Derry, N. H., June 3 (AP)—Game wardens said today the largest catch of square-tailed trout at Noble's pond, Fisherman's paradise, was 1500.

Anglers lined the pond on opening day, Saturday, and carried away 1000 fish from seven to 13 pounds. The catch was half as large. The pond will be open Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

NRA HOLDS
On City Contracts

Mayor Mansfield today warned contractors that they must agree to city that agreements under which they are operating went into effect when the NRA was in operation and that they are expected to observe the same.

Mayor Mansfield said that the city and fair trade practices prescribed by the codes.

Price charged for city agreed to pay were based on the NRA codes, the mayor pointed out.

This Is Life ROBERT E. ROGERS

Surprising news out of the Soviet Union! The Marxian-Lenin-Stalin tradition has been stretched to admit Shakespeare.

And oh, what a stretch is there, my countrymen!

Apparently there is a craze for Shakespeare on the boards. Starting with a full length performance of "Romeo and Juliet" — four hours and a half, which is longer than we ever allow our ears to hear — others of the Bard's pieces are being hurried into production.

Not merely those regularly produced in England but such rare offerings as "Titus Andronicus" and "The Taming of the Shrew" are being hurried into production.

H. E. Rogers

This is good news coming from a theater we have heard of as producing only plays about the five year plan, dam building, collective farms, and the like, and as being a constructive, scenery that looks like the steep-chase at a beach track.

Or plays about labor struggles played in actual gas plants or in the machine shops with laborers as actors. It is particularly good news when one remembers that early productions of Shakespeare in Russia were modernized, given expressionist treatment, rearranged and rewritten as Communist propaganda, rendered totally unrecognizable, in fact. Today, so far as we can learn, Shakespeare is being played intact, and allowed to speak for himself.

"Romeo and Juliet," for instance. The Theater of the Revolution has joined hands with the Young Communist League in showing the Bolshievik youth what romantic love is really like.

Marriage Too Easy

Apparently the younger generation over there is very much worried about marriage and the home and family. They think that marriage is too easy, divorce still easier. The young reformers tend to incite permanence in the love relationship.

They point out. It is true, that "Romeo and Juliet" ends unnecessarily in tragedy, and that the young couple lacked the social point of view, yet the intensity of their passion, their loyalty, and their faith even to death are admirable qualities which the young should emulate would do well to imitate.

At the same time the audience will be taught that the Renaissance conditions which brought about the tragedy no longer exist in the new state. In Russia Romeo and Juliet can live happily ever after.

But when it comes to the larger implications of Shakespeare, one wonders a little. The Soviet seems to be claiming him as their own. They feel that Shakespeare is an ally against Fascism and capitalism. He is a great realist, a strong enemy against the bourgeoisie, and of which sounds rather funny to an English-speaking student.

As a matter of fact it is pretty well agreed that Shakespeare is essentially petty bourgeois, whose aim it was to make enough money to buy a mansion, live in estate and sport a coat of arms as one of the gentry.

It is equally well understood that Shakespeare despised the common people and never lost an opportunity showing his contempt for them.

Workers "Clowns"

To Shakespeare the working class individually and in the mass was always comic. His country clowns or peasants were always burlesque. And his heroes and heroines, when they were contemporary, were almost invariably of the nobility and gentry.

Living in the very period of the rise of middle class capitalism and middle class Puritanism, he had nothing serious to say about that phenomenon. Of the great struggle which was to eventuate in the Civil War, the execution of Charles I and the Protectorate, a middle class Puritan regime, there was not a sign of interest or prophesy.

He was obviously not religious minded, but what religion he had was plainly Catholic. Otherwise he was a modern, in that he seemed to believe that character is destiny.

Yet Lenin knew enough to insist that even the Communist new great non-Communist literature that can see life steadily and see it whole, not merely in terms of the dogma of dialectical materialism.

It is fair to say, regardless of how we may interpret Shakespeare as an individual, that nearly every point of view and opinion about life finds eloquent expression somewhere in his scenes.

Hearing him even the most rigid Marxian may find illumination, a broadening of observation, a sense that human life is too wide and strong to be cribbed, cabined and confined within the prison walls of an ideology.

If the younger people are beginning to see the necessity for such education, we may look to see a new attitude and a new doctrine over there.

N. E. COUNCIL OF LABOR CONFERENCE

Washington, June 3.—A House-approved measure to authorize interstate compact for uniform labor laws drew notice today as a possible means to salvage a part, at least, of NIRA.

The bill would authorize the making of a labor conference of New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania representatives by Secretary Perkins, proponents of the McCormack bill, passed by the House June 3, indicated they would ask New England senators to press for passage.

Secretary Perkins, who summoned the labor meeting tomorrow, was represented as seeing in the McCormack bill for interstate compact a way toward constructive action to retaining certain NIRA provisions outlawed by Supreme Court edict.

The bill would authorize states to make agreements on labor and industrial legislation, subject to approval by state legislatures and by Congress.

Its principal supporters—Representative McCormack and Healey of Massachusetts—admitted many obstacles lay in the path of uniform labor laws for competing industrial states, but insisted the measure opened the way to preserve some of the benefits of NIRA.

"The bill would make possible uniform state laws to stabilize child labor and set up decent conditions of labor as regards hours and minimum wages," Healey said.

Assessing some joint action should be taken by industrial states, Healey said, "I might as well say that the bill is not a silver bullet in legislation among competing states had been a serious obstacle during the depression."

"There is a broad competition between the New England states," Healey said. "New England and the Northeastern States, with their relatively longer industrial history, have developed regulatory legislation on the labor side more stringent than that to be found in some other regions which have only recently become industrialized."

"Differing economic and social conditions among neighboring states in their labor laws have long been recognized; it is essential if the states are to be made, and which were hoped for under the now defunct NIRA, to be conserved."

Spokesman for the labor department said tomorrow's conference was merely to explore the possibilities held out through interstate compact, and said no effort would be made to commit the various states to any additional restrictions.

The likelihood was seen, however, that subsequent conferences would be held with Southern states in the hope of achieving agreement on fundamental labor regulations in competing industrial states.

Shouse Scores "Deal" For Success Fear

Washington, June 3.—The United States Chamber of Commerce today calmly pressed its "business case" as the heavy, ominous clouds grew over the destruction of NIRA.

Joseph Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, placed responsibility for the present business fear squarely on the administration.

Changes in national policy should come only through "open and above board" constitutional amendment, he said.

He said a perplexed nation waited for the House to pass the White House after his week-end on Chesapeake Bay.

The warning of Senator Borah (R-Iowa) that any changes in the Constitution must come through a vote of all the people fell on a capital confused and jittery over all the Supreme Court decision.

New Deal agencies seemingly marked time.

Many believe it will bring the long-talked-of realignment of political parties and split the country as definitely as did the slavery issue.

The liquor industry announced its voluntary decision to maintain honest labeling and fair trade practices with a new system of federal control is established.

In order to rally public opinion behind this drive, the organization announced the formation of the "Be-Square Club," whose slogan will be: "Beware bootleggers, boycott bootleg and banish bootlegging!"

Norris Hits Rule "By Injunction"

Washington, June 3.—Power of the courts to hold laws unconstitutional today prompted George Norris to describe American government as "a government by injunction." He said:

"I'm not sure the courts in any of the decisions it has made, but it does illustrate that we are a government by injunction."

Fr. Coughlin Says Ruling Unites New Deal Forces

Detroit, Mich., June 3.—The Supreme Court decision has killed the NRA but not the new deal, Reverend Charles E. Coughlin said in a radio address.

He declared:

"It (the court decision) will result in consolidating the broken ranks of the New Dealers."

"All is not lost. On the contrary, all is about to be gained. The lateral attack against rugged individualism is changing to a frontal attack against their general financial condition."

Father Coughlin warned the government must grant relief for 400,000 farmers, who stand in danger of losing their property as the result of the voiding of the Praster-Louke bill, or face "revolution."

He said:

"We are denying to the backbone of our country, the farmer, benefits we have given to the railroad, the municipality and the corporation."

This means revolution. These farmers will not either under law or over law forsake the farms which have suffered such an incredible depreciation in value due to the manipulation of the money market by those who expanded and contracted credit on their own free will."

He said the NRA was framed by statute lawyers from large corporations and the United States Chamber of Commerce who knew it was unconstitutional under our present setup.

Congress, he said, must rewrite the looseness out of our laws. He said a large motor corporation escaped federal supervision by selling its entire output, made in many states, to a dummy corporation in Michigan.

"We must return to Congress its important right of coining and regulating money," he said.

HOOVER WARNS OF PERILS OF BUREAUCRACY

By Associated Press

Des Moines, Ia., June 3.—Former President Hoover returned to his native state and sounded a warning today against what he termed a possible "political bureaucracy."

Here to address 178 Drake University graduates and to receive an honorary degree, Mr. Hoover said:

"You should be suspicious of any proposal that asks you to forgo the faithful exercise of your muscles and might, of any governmental action which limits your opportunities to work and produce."

"Some people would like to mobilize you into a political bureaucracy to run this civilization."

"But some of us hold that the only thing to do is to win them fairly by merit."

Mr. Hoover added:

"Will government permit you to breathe the pure air of liberty in the spirit of the Bill of Rights? That is the thing that you have come to look and for. For in this matter you enter life at one of the most crucial periods of American history."

The former President confessed himself "troubled" about the future. What troubles him, he said:

"What the forces of government may impose on you that will limit or destroy your inspiration, your incentives and your opportunities have departed."

"The exponents of the new social order would dim some of your hopes by telling you that hope, new adventure and new opportunity have departed."

"I don't agree to that."

Hoover compared Iowa farm life today with conditions during the first 10 years of his life spent on a Cedar County farm and said:

"The farm was a place of constant new wonders. New manufacturing processes were discovered with every changing season, and a small boy was needed as part of the directing staff in all of them."

"The codes had not yet arrived, and his hours of the day were designed to give food, sleep, chores, school and recreation."

"If there was a depression or a business cycle either present or coming or going nobody told us, so that nobody sat up nights with the radio worrying about that."

TULANE HONORS Filene, Gay, Clark

Three New England men will receive honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws from Tulane University of Louisiana, during the centennial celebration at New Orleans, June 8-12, the university announced today.

They are Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant; Professor Edwin F. James, first dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration; and Dean Charles Edward Clark of the Yale Law School.

Mr. Filene is being honored for "preminence in business administration and research."

Roosevelt Reversal Revealed

By Universal Service

Washington, June 3.—President Roosevelt, when governor of New York, was an ardent foe of centralized federal government.

In a speech broadcast over a national hookup on March 2, 1930, Roosevelt declared that "any national administration attempting to make laws for the whole nation, such as was wholly practical in Great Britain, would inevitably result at some future time in a dissolution of the Union itself."

This view contrasted in striking fashion with the opinions he enunciated at his historic press conference discussing the Supreme Court's NRA decision. The President declared the court opinion had thrown the country back to the "horses and buggy days."

The big issue before the nation today, he said, is whether the federal government shall have the power to control national social and economic problems, or whether this control shall be returned to the states. He left no doubt he favored broadening the federal powers.

Excerpts from the President's 1930 speech, called "An Address on State Rights," follow:

"As a matter of fact and law, the governing rights of the states are all of those which have not been surrendered to the national government by the Constitution or its amendments. Wisely or unwisely, people know that under the Eighteenth Amendment Congress has been given the right to legislate on this particular subject, but this is not the case in the matter of a greater number of other vital problems of government, such as the conduct of public utilities, of banks, of insurance, of business, of agriculture, of education, of social welfare, and of a dozen other important features. In these

Washington must not be encouraged to interfere.

"Thus already it was clear to the framers of our Constitution that the greatest possible liberty of self-government must be given to each state, and that any national administration attempting to make laws for the whole nation, such as was wholly practical in Great Britain, would inevitably result at some future time in a dissolution of the Union itself."

"The doctrine of regulation and legislation by 'master minds' in whose judgment and will all the people may gladly and quietly acquiesce, has been too glaringly apparent at Washington during these last ten years. Were it possible to find 'master minds' so unselfish, so willing to decide unhesitatingly against their own personal interests or private prejudices; men almost God-like in their ability to hold the scales of justice with as even hand — such a government might be to the interests of the country, but there are none such on our political horizon, and we cannot expect a complete reversal of all the teachings of history."

"On such a small foundation have we erected the whole enormous fabric of federal government which costs us now $5,500,000,000 a very year; and if we do not halt this steady process of building commissions and regulatory bodies and special legislation like huge inverted pyramids over every one of the simple constitutional provisions, we will soon be spending many billions of dollars more."

"This is what we call the doctrine of 'Home Rule,' and the whole spirit and intent of the constitution is to carry this great principle into the relations between the national government of the states."

"I think if we understand what I have tried to make clear tonight as to the fundamental principles on which our government is built, and what the underlying idea of the relations between individuals and states and states and the national government should be, we can all of us reason for ourselves what should be the proper course in regard to federal legislation on any of the questions on the day."

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Garden Party at Donald Watson's Milton Estate

By BETTY ALDEN

THE OUTDOOR SEASON is with us again and yesterday one of the first gay garden parties was held on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Watson in Milton. . . . the occasion was a "welcome home" party in honor of their debutante daughter, Betty, who has just returned to the family fold after a year spent studying at an exclusive school in Italy. . . .

It was a very merry group of young people who enjoyed a delicious luncheon served at small tables shaded by spreading trees and vividly striped umbrellas. . . . but their mood changed from merriment to hilarity after luncheon when they rolled up their sleeves and played baseball and deck tennis. . . .

A Merry Party
WHEN THE PARTY broke up late in the afternoon, the guests, which included quite a few of last year's debut, as well as several sister buds of the hostess and their friends, all proclaimed that, though they were all in for so much fun and exercise, it had been the best party yet of the new season. . . .

The hostess wore a simple frock of white silk with a vividly striped jacket of red, green and white. . . . Her mother's gown of red and white printed chiffon was very summery and sheer. . . .

Edith Lewis, Leslie Eustis, Anne Soule, Betty Prescott and Margaret "Cochet," as well as May Bryant, Janet Forbes, Marjorie Saltonstall, Gertrude McGinley and Martha Rogerson, were among the guests. . . .

Three successive days have witnessed three different types of debutante parties. . . . Besides the luncheon yesterday, there was a dinner Saturday evening at The Country Club for Harriet Brigham and Ellen Rhodes, and today Betty Alden will be presented at a luncheon in the historic Dorothy Quincy House down on the South Shore. . . .

Guests at Dinner for Ushers
SATURDAY'S PARTY WAS PRECEDED by an usher's dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Rhodes at which the guests included, besides the two debutantes, their brothers, F. Gorham Brigham, Jr., Timothy, Adam and Denis Rhodes, and the cousins of Miss Brigham's, Allan and Gordon McKissock, Barbara McKissock, Sam Adams and Zebadiah Adams, Jr. . . .

Harriet wore a fragile organdie frock of lemon yellow with which she carried an arm bouquet of delphinium and white iris and her sister deb wore white organdie with yellow and coral daisies. . . .

Both girls were graduated from Winsor last week, where they were classmates of Virginia Olney, who is better known as "Polly". . . . Mrs. James H. Means of Chestnut street will be hostess at the large luncheon today at which Polly will make her bow into the social world. . . . Miss Polly is the daughter of Mrs. Virginia Olney of Boylston street, Chestnut Hill. . . .

Mrs. Barbara Young Hamlen has deserted the seaside colony at Marblehead to spend the spring in the spacious country home of her father, B. Loring Young, in Weston. . . .

THE GOOD SHIP MAYFLOWER, on which the "Holy Rollers" cruised around the harbor on Saturday evening, docked in the wee small hours to enable the merry-makers to disembark and go their various ways, seeking their homes and a few short hours of slumber before the peep of dawn. . . . Dancing and singing on board was enjoyed by the Bob Saltonstalls, Abbot Fay, Benjie Beale, Owen Livermore, Marjorie Saltonstall, Happy Gardiner, Johnnie Garrison, Jessie Fay and other members of the peppy post deb set too numerous to mention. . . .

Priscilla Prince, who is to be the maid of honor in the wedding party of Dorothea Newman, has invited the whole bridal entourage and some intimate friends of the bride and groom, to an all-day country party at her new home in Dublin on Sunday, the 16th, a week before the wedding. . . .

Miss Newman will plight her troth to Theodore Chase at a late afternoon ceremony on the 22nd, in the First Parish Meeting House in Concord, after which the guests will assemble at "Tytyre," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Eaton, the bride's parents, for the wedding reception. . . .

Named Delegate to Convention
MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH, of Marlborough street, has been appointed a delegate to the Florence Nightingale International Foundation which will meet in London on July 2. . . . the Foundation was established by the League of the Red Cross to organize courses in nursing at Bedford College in London. . . .

Miss Sylvia Warren, who is mistress of "River Bend," a rambling old estate in Dover where she has a fine selection of thoroughbred horses and dogs, is sailing on June 20 to spend the summer travelling in Europe. . . . She will be accompanied by Miss Helen Homans. . . .

There is always something new and decidedly pleasant to look forward to in the social world and now it is the opening of the beautiful Skygardens stop the Puritan Hotel. This lovely startling dining and dancing place will lure society to its rooftop on Wednesday evening, and every the summer evening thereafter. Many large parties are being planned for the opening night. . . .

Gardner, Mrs. Marion Higgins, Mrs. Ranna Weston, Mrs. George Ramon, Mrs. Vinello Johnson, Mrs. Frank Hardy Damon, Miss Marion DeCove and Mrs. William Gilman. . . .

Mary Curley Honored At Beach Tea

A VERITABLE GARDEN by-the-sea was the lovely rambling home of the Charles Donovans at Phillip Beach, yesterday afternoon, for one of the largest and jolliest parties given in honor of Miss Curley. . . . Cluster after cluster of beautiful hothouse blossoms, from the stately rose to the frailest blue gentian mingled their colors with afternoon gowns of newest design. . . . A tea table richly set with lace and silver was presided over by four charming hostesses. . . . Miss Anne Kilgill of New York, attended in brown pin dot chiffon suit, with large sailor hat. . . . Miss Jane Anne Smith of Chicago, ill, very smart in black with three large white daisies at the high neckline. . . . Miss Loreta Bremner, of Chicago, in black swaggar suit and brimmed hat and Miss Nellie Benelli of New York, a white rough cloche hat, also her wind blown blonde hair. . . . they all arrived yesterday and will be house guests this week in Boston. . . . Catherine Donnelly, accepting her share of attention as one of the important members of the wedding party, was most becoming in turquoise blue wool sheer. . . . Florioce Hurley was lovely in lilac chiffon, with large purple sleeves and they say of self timed not out-lined with forget-me-nots. . . . Katherine Glynn was in dark blue lafite. . . . Mary Jane Ryan and her fiancé, Justine Connor. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Murphy of Jamaica Plain, Mrs. Murphy wearing a black wool ensemble gown with large white coin dots. . . . Looking on with alert interest were Dr. and Mrs. William O'Halloran of Newton, Jr. and Mrs. Francis T. Jantzen of Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Mullin of Winchester, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond T. Stuart of Newton. . . .

Listen, World!

"Everything's Grist for the Mill!" Remember Granddaddy's homely old saying—"Everything's grist for the mill!" . . . Sounds funny to you, maybe, who've never heard a mill nor baked a loaf nor spread a bag of meal. But even at that you can get the picture. . . . Men taking life with their pakees. Fix it up as they like. . . . aching such lack and honest as even the poorest of us know today. . . . Everything had to be "grit" for the mill of their desperate necessity. . . . Bare corn, wheat and rye if they were lucky enough to have filled land. . . . But often as not, wild seeds shared with the birds, burrs and berries, weed roots, acorns and food to get 'em. . . . Now was it only a question of food? Life depends on more than the thing you eat. . . .

and laughter, campaigns and adventure. . . . Out of it all they ground the grist of human drama and learned the dark inwardness of life—or its sudden, fierce flight—as surely as though they had been New York sophisticates applauding Bernhardt, or Greek poets listing to Homer. . . . By what magic did they grasp and abundance where, with all our sentimentalism, would find only deadly boredom. . . . The answer's simple enough. They took life as it came. . . . all of it. . . . regardless of source or price, rejecting nothing. They took life that way not only because they had to but because they expected to. . . . "Fruit Cakes and Run Out" didn't have much social standing in Granddaddy's day. . . . And now? Is everything grist for our modern mill? Heavens—NO! . . . We've gotten so choosy that we hardly dare live at all. . . . Wrened, threatened, advised and coddled like Dorian greifs from the moment were born, existence becomes one long dodging of dangerous reality. . . . as a consequence, most of us are still trying to stay "Inebriated" . . . "Be happy, forty!" "Don't be afraid to suffer or take chances!" "For fear we'll get "Diswater Hands!" . . .

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

The West Has More Prospective Husbands

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"THERE are serious difficulties connected with the geographical distribution of potential husbands."

Score of girls, who had come to Washington, D. C., to fill jobs in its various alphabetical departments—and who thought perhaps that romance, as well as a pay envelope, would be waiting there—listened in taut silence to a paper which held out scant hope for romance.

The paper was read to the American Eugenics Society at a meeting a week or so ago. And it was revealed that in the national census there are only 71 men to 100 marriageable women. The paper painted a dreary picture of the lack of opportunity for a girl between 20 and 25 years of age to find a husband.

DO WEST, GIRLS

Washington has never been a happy hunting ground for husbands even when girls have every opportunity which wealth and background afford. It was a favorite abode of Uncle Joe Cannon, a well-remembered Speaker of the House of Representatives, but a debutante in Washington had less chance than a snowflake in—(you know where).

Young ladies importuning their fathers and congressmen to try and get them jobs in the new alphabetical departments should heed some of the figures compiled in this paper by the American Eugenics Society.

Girls who would like to find a Prince Charming wholly to their taste would do well to migrate to certain states in the Northwest, where there is to be found an excess of males. These comparatively few states are Nevada, with 158 men to 100 women; Wyoming, 142 to 100 women; Arizona, 121 men to 100 women; Montana, 106 men to 100 women.

REASON FOR SCARCITY

The author of this paper advances several reasons for the husband famine in various areas. Chief among them is the fact that most of the men in the Northwest are married before the age of 30. The median age of the first marriages for men in the United States is 25.6.

The author of the paper went on to state: "I have yet to find the person who could not count on the fingers of one hand all the single men in his acquaintance under 35 years of age who were really good prospective husbands from every point of view."

"In four out of five marriages, the man is older than the woman. While the median age for marriage of men is 25.6 years, that of women is 22.6 years. As men grow older, they tend to increase the difference between their ages and that of their wives."

For this reason, the paper strongly advises college girls to seek husbands as soon as they leave college, or even earlier, and let the caterer do by.

Taking these facts into consideration, valuable advice the girl graduate would seem to be: "Go West, young woman, go West."

MRS. BEECKMAN

ON MANNERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: Will you please state an argument for us? Miss A says that the use of the following is quite proper and Miss B says it is not.

When a gentleman addresses or asks a young lady a question, should she answer, "Yes, sir," or "No, sir"? Miss B says that these terms are passé, and Miss A says that it shows a mark of refinement.

READER: When a man asks her a question, when she answers "Yes, Mr. Graham," or "No, Mr. Graham," or "Yes, Tom," or "No, Tom," or just "Yes," or "No," she is answering a question by a man who is not a "sir," or "No, sir."

What a Dream!

HOW would you like to be this little girl, so many wanting to marry her, so PERFECTLY beautiful in herself? There are millions of such little girls in the world, and they live in DREAMLAND. In the lower right hand corner of Nell Brinkley's beautiful picture you see the little 22-year-old dreamer, whose mind, traveling far ahead in sleep, has built up this perfect picture of an embosomed of riches.

The happy little curl-headed dreamer says nothing when she wakes, except "I had such a lovely dream."

Not 10 young men, with beautiful sleek hair, lovely smiles or fierce looks, are necessary to realize the dream.

Only one, honest GOOD boy, with a KIND HEART and loyalty. May this little dreamer find and be chosen by the best young man that she ever sees in her dream.

And may all of my readers find true happiness in marriage. There is no other MAXIMUM happiness, for it takes two human beings, a man and a woman, to make the REAL, everyday human unity.

Meticulous Touch

Insures A Sweet Aura

By JULIE SHELLEY

THERE is no reason for a woman or girl to be offended if you inquire whether she uses a deodorant or if you suggest that she use one.

A deodorant, today, in as much essential to meticulous grooming as a daily shower or tubbing. It stands to reason that a bath early in the morning, before we go out for our day's activities, is not sufficient to keep us sweet.

As the day grows warmer and we become active, our pores secrete more freely. So it is quite evident that a deodorant, whether in liquid, cream or powder form, is a protection.

And age does not determine whether or not a deodorant is in vogue. Any physician will tell you that at times the adolescent child perspires more freely than an adult. There are days when this natural elimination is most profuse.

So you see that girls and women, in order to avert any slight embarrassment, should especially during warm days, have recourse to a product which relieves the purpose of keeping us fresh as a daisy.

It pleased me very much to find that the girls in Hollywood were extremely candid on the subject of deodorants. Almost every one of them believed a deodorant was essential—from the young feature players to older long established stars.

For instance it was as natural for Frances Carlson—that young hope of the Fox Studio—to tell me she used a deodorant as it was for her to tell me they yellow roses and gardenias are her favorite flowers.

So away with this taboo on a very important subject! Be thankful that we have a choice of such aids. I for one, am particularly pleased with a new product in powder form which meets the problem with ease, and you will be, too. If you will test it. It is unscented and it does not gold the pores or efface normal perspiration—which gives it a gold standard as it is a necessary summer cosmetic.

If you wish to know the name of this efficacious deodorant and where it is sold, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston "Evening American," enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Barbara Baglietto is one of the leading contestants in the diving events at the Farmount Terrace Plunge, Northern California open swimming championship which will take place on the Nob Hill, San Francisco, Plunge tomorrow and Wednesday. If Barbara is as graceful in all her dives, she probably will be the next Olympic champion.

Rockingham Park, N. H., June 3—As long as the gambling element flourishes in the horse racing business, which means as long as the thoroughbred industry survives, tales of fraud and deception, with accompanying heartbreak to the hapless victims, will follow.

GAINOR

Mr. Sam Cohen
Dear Sir:
For the past few months practically every time I have glanced at the sporting page of a newspaper there has either

I would like to make myself clear on this matter. I am positively not avoiding a meeting with the New Haven negro. I am seeking one. Galtner is one man I know I can knock out and the sooner I get him to a state of

When we met a year ago I went into the bout with a badly damaged right hand. In the second round when I knocked Gaiñor down for a nine count with a left hook that hand cracked.

Since the meeting with Gainer last summer I have scored knock-outs over some of the best men in the light-heavyweight class. Some of these men were rated at least as highly as Gainer and some might even be considered better.

I am going to insist that my managers make this match at once and end for all time these charges. I am avoiding a meeting with the New Haven boy, because he defented me a year ago and I fear he may do it again.

Fortunately, there are even more beautiful little stories around the race track than there are sordid.

Tom Swords, one of the leading stable owners here, brought a little brown-eyed faun as a mascot for his thoroughbreds. A small wire cage he had constructed, and inside the lovely baby creature he put forth the center of admiration.

There's a lot of wild country around Rockingham, and there breaks in the fences. So that nightly three wild deer come waled by the call of the kind.

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1948, or deliver to a Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M. Tuesday, June 4

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Rockingham. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races. Tickets to the Rockingham Races will Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given a 10% discount. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be awarded the prizes in descending order: second counts 6 points, and third counts 3 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be the winners of the prize.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the winners will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the follow-

STOCK MARKET

New York June 3—

Steel ruled firm. Chrysler was in demand in the auto flat, but General Motors was backward. Rails tried to rally, but made little progress. Farm implementers are buoyed by settlement of the I. C. case strike. American Telephone was strong and utilities generally firm. Mining shares were mixed. DuPont and American Can rose a point apiece, while Union Carbide advanced in demand. Commodities showed little change, cotton continuing weak, but sugar down and grains better. Gold currencies were strong and bonds

While some market observers expected the administration would push remedial legislation through Congress before official expiration of the NIRA on June 16, some questioned whether such action would prove to be an exceptionally speculative or investment factor. Most analysts thought that the post-NIRA influence on business psychology might, temporarily, tend to exaggerate seasonal trading.

Massachusetts bank will hear Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., Saturday. His speech for the State Bank Association convention in Swampscott is expected cover topics of wide significance in the bank field.

Alban M. Pope, president of First of Boston Corporation, is slated as a speaker and will deliver the principal address at the Friday afternoon session. His subject will be the United States Government and other securities markets. With such headline material, his talent it is hardly any wonder that this year the convention promises to be exceptionally well attended.

What of the gold shares? Heard in State Street. A coupon is supplied in the circular bulletin of the New England Financial Service. In short it is a leading gold share are worth purchase. The nub of the argument is that the principal market of the world are slowly moving towards stabilization. When this occurs it will be a price nearer $33 per ounce. Such a happening would lend stability to current earnings of gold producers. Our choices of Natomas—held for months in long term account—Alaska Ju and finally McInyre Purcup

FLOYD GIBBON'S PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"Canvas Trap"

Boston Man's "Tough Break" in Alaska a Lifesaver

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY.

Here's a yarn from the bitter and blustery Territory of Alaska—the story of a lad who got all the best of it in the end, because he got all the worst of it in the beginning.

You know it sometimes works out that way—a piece of something that looks like tough luck will suddenly turn out to be the break of a lifetime—and that is what happened to JACOB "JACK" CHESTER, of 99 GLENVILLE AVENUE, BOSTON.

Because Jack had to sleep in the cold, he managed to stay away from the heat. That doesn't sound extraordinary. But wait till you read Jack's story.

It was in the early spring of 1889. Jack and another fellow left Seattle for Skagway, intending to push their way into the Klondike and do a little gold prospecting.

Skagway was the end of the transportation line in those days, so when they got there, they shouldered their packs and started out on foot, along the grading of the White Pass and Yukon railroad which was then in the process of building.

The grading ran up the side of a long hill, and there was, they had been told, a railroad construction camp at the top.

It was late afternoon when they reached the summit, and there they found a gale of icy wind howling over their heads. For a moment, Jack and his partner were tempted to turn back, but after some discussion, they decided to push on.

Night fell. The wind increased. They were stumbling along, chilled to the bone, and almost all in, when they saw a faint glimmer of light up ahead of them.

And in all his life, Jack says, he can't recall ever having seen a more cheery or welcome sight than that light.

The light had come from a camp of the grading gang—a camp that consisted of three large tents (bunk-houses, dining-tent and commissary) and three or four smaller ones.

It was supper time when they arrived, and they sat down in the dining-tent to a good hot meal that brought them back to their usual good looks.

They asked the camp boss if he could put them up for the night, and he assigned them to bunks in the bunk-tent. The bunks he gave them were in the rear of the tent, because the ones in the middle, where the big barrel-shaped stove was located, were all occupied by the men working on the job.

That was where Jack's tough luck came in. He had to sleep, that night, in the coldest part of a draughty tent. But that piece of tough luck of his saved him a hot time later on in the evening.

Jack and his partner were tired. They rolled into their beds and dropped off into a heavy slumber. But it wasn't long before they were up again, to find the whole world tumbling about their ears.

"I don't know how long I had been asleep," says Jack, "but I woke up feeling cramped and constricted. A heavy, flapping something was holding me down, and a few feet away I could see a flame immediately coming nearer and nearer the spot where I lay helpless. Then, suddenly, I was wide awake, and I realized what must have happened—that the tent had blown down and caught fire."

"Further investigation, by the light of that blazing canvas, proved that I was right. The tent had fallen, and the bunk, too, had collapsed. And I was all tangled up in the wreckage."

"Frantically, I tried to extricate myself from that confining net of canvas—even if it was only to get out and face the Arctic blast in nothing but my underwear. Better rooms to death than to be burned to a cinder, I thought."

Then, suddenly, as I lay there in my wick, I found myself free. An extra strong gust of wind tore the tent loose from all fastenings and carried it away, and I found myself exposed to the icy blast of an Alaskan gale, with the thermometer at 15 or 20 below zero.

"We were quickly gathered in the other tent, and provided with some clothes from the commissary. The other tent held in the wind. If they had blown down, we would all probably have perished, for there wasn't a vestige of shelter for miles around, and most of the men were running about, just as I was, with the most of their clothing off, and nothing but their underwear to protect them from the cold, and the chill wind that swept over that bare, unprotected mountain top."

Jack wasn't frightened as much while the hullabaloo was going on. He was kept too busy, even to think.

It wasn't until afterward, when he began thinking of what might have happened, that he really began to get scared.

When accounts of the casualty were taken, it was found that 14 men had been burned—six of them severely—by the flames that caught the tent when it came in contact with the stove.

Those burned men were all the lucky ones who had the warm bunks up in the center of the tent.

And the hard luck that had made Jack sleep in the cold was really the good luck that saved him from injury.

When Jack went back to the place where the tent had been to see what he could recover from the wreckage, he found—nothing. Everything he owned had been swept away by the howling wind and fire. He and his partner had to go to work for the railroad to earn money to continue their journey.

"Since then," says Jack, "I have been within a hair's breadth of drowning, and once I was buried alive. But I have never had a more agonizing for moments than when the screams, groans and curses of those burning men mingled with the howling wind and the flames that were creeping up on me."

That's Jack Chester's story—and it'll be there are thousands of lads and ladies in Boston who could step in for caution and match it with one of their own.

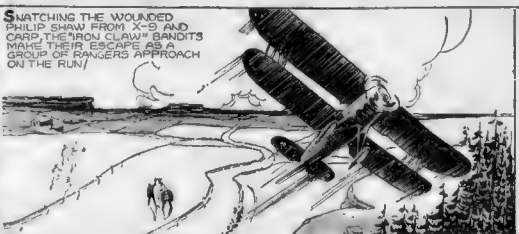

Hundreds of thousands would be more like it, for everybody has had at least one adventure. Write up three yarns. Tomorrow I'll be around again with a blazing hot yarn at "The Blind Woman Who Screamed."

'TUGGLE WOULD'

By Rex Beach

In Steve's cabin Montgomery poured himself half a tumbler of whisky and drank it slowly. It was a steamy evening, smoke from the cook fire lay like a blue ceiling over Blanquito.

"These blacks are a problem," said he. "We've got to sweeten the mess with some white labor." "How?" Steve inquired sharply. "I wish I knew. We've got a lot of white labor, but we need plenty of drivers and black drivers. There isn't a first-class carpenter or a competent mechanic on the payroll. Philip paid for it in a funk."

"Yes," Steve declared we can't bring this creek until the floods go down."

"We've got to bridge it, or we can't move anything in here until fall."

Furthermore, it's holding up the barges."

"Speaking of bridges, Campagna Creek is on another rampage and we took out our people again."

"We haven't any more and for the time being we've got to wait."

"Lucky we have grub for a week or we'd be cooking crock pot."

"Not bad eating at that. It's better than some of our limited staff. Throw a suspension bridge over the creek."

"The creek narrows above the crossing, and there are some rapids close to the bank, Zepher, I think. They'll do to hold up a mile."

"I doubt if we have the cable."

"Well, use rope, or vines. We've got Indian vines. We'll tie it up out of nothing. It'll take two weeks to bring up, but that way it'll be, we'll get some sort of a bridge in tomorrow."

Bad News

There came a knock, a messenger entered with a note which Steve read, frowning.

"You'll have to take care, I must go home."

"Something wrong?"

"My boy is sick. Campagna is taking him north on the first ship."

"Oh, I'm sorry."

"You have to rig that suspension bridge and keep the supplies coming."

"Tell Philip he must manage somehow to cross that stream again."

"If he keeps sinking logs into that stretch he'll find bottom in time."

"Meanwhile start cutting a road to the ridge above Yelo, there where our ballast must come from."

"If the light rains arrive before I get back, start cutting that road. Yelo's got to start hauling dirt."

"Yelo's got to start hauling dirt. Yelo's got to start hauling dirt. Yelo's got to start hauling dirt."

"No sense taking that with the Campagna bridge out of my way. How will you cross?"

"Montgomery inquired."

"My God, General. There are no boats in that creek."

"Not many, I fancy, at that time of the water."

"But, God God! You mustn't risk it. I shall let you go alone."

"Stay here and carry on. Tell Philip I want that bridge built when I get back."

Pentecost strode out into the drizzle.

"Night fell, the trail that led to the Chancelade was little more than a dark tunnel through the bush, for the trees top overhead, in places it was a tunnel in a filthy slush, in others it was a tunnel in a filthy slush, in others it was a tunnel in a filthy slush."

Steve knew it was never steady, in a steaming sweat, he slumped through the bush. When he saw ahead of him the swirling surface of Campagna Creek, without removing his goggles, he plunged in and swam across, emerging refreshed by the double coolness of the stream.

Trip North

At the river landing he rounded a crew and ordered them into one of the boats.

All that night he urged them forward, he arrived home in the following afternoon to find a dead horse and a dead man.

That which the most greatly feared had been realized, and she was distracted.

At this threat to her first born, all her joy, all her confidence had fled.

According to Doctor Wilkins the boy was not seriously ill, a trip north would cure him.

"This is no place for you and the children during the rainy season, anyhow," Steve declared. "Hannah notified."

"Now that you no longer need me, I suppose it's wicker to stay here."

"I need you as much as ever, only I'm not selfish enough."

"Not selfish!" The woman laughed shortly. "That would be"

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAURENCE BNAW, JUNIOR NATIONAL DIRECTOR
DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION
E. M. of Boston.

Another valuable addition to the Junior Birdmen library has been issued and is now available to all members of the organization. It is the Airport Manual and is No. 8 in the handbook series.

The Airport Manual contains 13 chapters of interesting information for all Junior Birdmen and others who are interested in aeronautics. Within its covers are 28 photographs, a front cover illustration by Harry Haas and a unique illustrated manuscript drawn by C. S. Colby.

A few of the interesting chapters are: Airport Location, Airport Etiquette, What to See at an Airport, Airport Traffic Rules and Regulations, Airport Night Lighting, How to Report Jobs, and Chapter on an Airport.

The Airport Manual, like all Junior Birdmen handbooks, sells for 10 cents and can be obtained by addressing the Junior Birdmen Headquarters, 100 Park West, New York City, N. Y.

For a list of the interesting chapters and a letter containing a coupon for an order form for the handbook, write to the Junior Birdmen Headquarters, 100 Park West, New York City, N. Y.

While each member interested in aeronautics should have all the handbooks, this one is of special interest to many boys and girls who wish to learn more about flying. It is a book that you can read over and over again, and it is a book that you can read over and over again.
